STOLE GLOVES

John Hookberry and a Negro Help Themselves

One forenoon John Hookberry and a negro named Brastow were standing in front of Bryan & Co's furnishing store on North Water street, close to Blaine's drug store, when the two men made a grab for boxes of display gloves hanging in front of the store. It was not known at the time who had stolen the goods, but from the description given suspicion was fastened upon Brastow and Hookberry. John was found in a saloon by Officer Leach, and he was marched over toward the jail. The negro, however, did not want to prosecute Hookberry and would let him go if he would surrender the gloves. John readily complied, and he had put away at the end of a hall in Powers' Block. Now the police are trying to find Brastow who is said to put into John's hand to steal the gloves.

The reporter asked Hookberry what he intended to do with the gloves. "Oh, I was going to keep out a pair for myself and sell the others," he said. "But didn't you know that stealing is wrong and that it would get you into trouble?" "No I didn't," was the singular reply, "But I do now."

John appears to treat the matter as a joke, and he is free to say that Brastow will have to go to jail.

DRUG STORE CLOSE

The Ralph Templeton Pharmacy in Opera Block Suspended

The pharmacy in Grand opera house block, established a few years ago by Ralph Templeton and L. W. Dwyer, and lately conducted alone by Mr. Templeton, was closed this afternoon at one o'clock by Sheriff Peck and Deputy Mulkin, on three executions for the following amounts:

Mary L. Templeton $1081.17
Mabel L. Keck 100.00
James Mulliken 4.12 04
Total $2261.26

The amount of the assets is not known. The furniture is of the finest quality, and there is a large amount of valuable goods in stock. Mr. Templeton, who is a careful and well-known pharmacist, has given the business close attention, and that he is financially embarrassed will be generally regretted by his many friends.

Mr. Templeton has made an assignment to Harry R. Midkiff. The stock is valued at $5,000. The small claims amount to about $1,000 making total liabilities $2,500.

PROF SCHULTZ AGAIN

Took Another Big Dose of Calomel in Chicago

Prof. John O. Schultz, the German vocal teacher who caused something of a sensation in Decatur last summer by becoming insane, made an attempt in Chicago Sunday to end his life by taking a big dose of calomel. He is lying in a mental state at the Mount Pleasant Hospital. After his arrest in Decatur the professor was adjudged insane and sent to the state asylum at Joliet. He was released in a short time, and then went to Chicago where he formed classes. Poor health, disipation, and intemperance, reduced his pupils to a few and he became disconsolate. He had to leave his gold watch. It is believed that the professor's father is a prominent clergyman in Germany.

A FOOT BALL GAME

Decatur vs. Champaign at the Race Track Saturday

Some great sport is promised the foot ball enthusiasts in the city Saturday, Jan. 7th, when the Decatur High School Eleven will be pitted against the University of Illinois Second Eleven, of Champaign, Ill., in an exciting game. The game will be called at 2 o'clock at the Trotting Association Park north of the city and it is anticipated that a large crowd will attend from Champaign as well as other onlookers in the vicinity. It is also expected that a large crowd of young ladies and gentlemen from the High School will be present, in fact it is expected that the street cars will run to the park and the game will undoubtedly be a hotly contested one.

A New Buyer Secured

The New Goods Company of New York, for December, appointed the following paragraph:

Mr. Charles Elmer, who has been a long time manager and buyer of ladies' velvet and dress goods, and for the past few years has been manager and buyer of one of the largest of retailers on Tremont street, will hereafter act with the New Goods Company, of New York, and will be in charge of the Decatur branch. The new goods company is a very successful firm, having been fortunate in procuring the services of so bright, experienced and progressive a gentleman as Mr. Elmer, who will bring to the new branch all the experience, judgment and taste essential to a good buyer, and will be most valuable in extending the business of this already large and prosperous firm.

Mr. Elmer arrived in Decatur this afternoon. He was lately with the firm of J. N. Collins & Co., Fourteenth street New York, which a short time since went out of business.

New Year Party at Macon

The young men of Macon gave a New Year party at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hight, in honor of their best girl. The games were played and music furnished by the club. At 10.30 they adjourned to the Transient House, where oysters, ice cream, cake and coffee were served. This was a surprise to the ladies. The following registered: Misses Louise Schudel, Edith Gibson, Clara Hight, Lizette and Bertha Small, Thelma Dwyer, Edna Dwyer, and Misses Daniel Dyer, Geo. Walker, Corral Werna, Walter Glenn, Charles Stoddard, Frank Hight, Bert Briscoe and Will Pank. All enjoyed themselves very much and were well pleased with the liberal accommodations shown toward them by Mr. Herbert and his two daughters, Lily and Daisy.

Supervisors' Assembly

Supervisors A. H. Cope, J. B. Nowlin and William Slaughter left this morning for Champaign, where they will attend the meeting of the State Association of Supervisors and Commissioners, which convenes to-day in that city. A banquet will be given in honor of the Association to-morrow evening at the Drill Hall of the University of Illinois, by the citizens of Champaign and Urbana. Quite a number of prominent citizens from different parts of the state, have been invited to this banquet and it will be an elaborate affair.

CUT HIS OWN THROAT

Desperate Attempt of John Williams to Kill Himself.

The Transient House at Macon—the Scene of a Gory Act—it was a Dull Knife

Macon furnishes a gory sensation to-day—a desperate attempt at suicide in a room at the Transient House, of which William Harbert is the proprietor. The would-be suicide is John Williams, an old soldier who has a wife but no children.

Williams is a farmer by occupation, having charge of the farm of Richard Payne, his brother-in-law, whose home is at 761 West Decatur street, this city. The farm is located in Milan township, 6 1/2 miles east of Macon. Williams is about 50 years of age. He was in Macon all day yesterday, and when evening came he went to the Transient House and engaged a room for the night. He did not get up in time for breakfast this morning. Mr. Harbert thought Williams needed waking and he went to the room to find the door locked. He knocked on the door, but could get no answer except this strange inquiry in smothered tones: "Is that the sheriff?" Mr. Harbert knocked again and again without getting any response. Finally he forced open the door, and was startled beyond expression to discover at a glance that Williams had made a desperate attempt to take his own life. He was close to the bed, with an old pocket knife in his hand, stabbing at his breast and making cuts at his throat. Harbert hastily took the knife from Williams, who by that time, from loss of blood, was quite weak. He offered no resistance. The bed was saturated with blood, and there was every indication that Williams had been using the knife for over an hour with the purpose of ending his life. He made a bad job of it and will probably recover.

THE WOUNDS
Dr. Rogers and Dr. Kyner were called to give Williams surgical attention. The examination disclosed the fact that Williams had stabbed himself in four places near the heart, had given his right thumb a job with the point of the knife, and had cut his throat, severing part of his wind pipe, but failing to cut the jugular veins. The condition of the man was quite alarming, but by effective and quick work the doctors got him in reasonably good shape, and at last accounts he was resting as comfortably as could be expected. There is no immediate danger of death.

Williams appeared to be in a crazy state and because of the cuts in his throat he could only speak in a whisper. Water placed to his lips ran out at the hole in his throat on his breast. It will take quite a long time to heal.

The attempters caused general excitement in Macon, and a crowd collected at the Transient House to see the man and learn of his condition. Messengers were sent to Williams' home to notify his wife of what had happened.

Speculation is rife as to what Williams could have meant when, in response to the first knock on the door, he asked, Harbert if that was the sheriff. Possibly Williams has committed some act which merits punishment, or perhaps he realized as he was using the knife on himself he should be arrested.

It is said that Williams was the owner of a fine farm, of about 100 acres near the farm of his brother-in-law, Mr. Payne. He was not serious and frugal, and was a reliable in all his dealings.

A MURDER TO BEAT

This afternoon a REPUBLICAN representative found Richard Payne at his home and informed the household of Williams' attempt at suicide. It was the first time that news of Williams' act had been made public. Payne said he was not at all surprised, and he said that he had been in Bloomington several days visiting three sisters, two of whom are widows. He proposed in Decatur on a visit to Macon and to see his wife. He was then in his usual good spirits. Williams lately received a great increase of passion. He was a private in Co. B, 39th Illinois Infantry and enlisted at Bloomington, Ill.

Mrs. Williams arrived at Macon to day at noon and is now at the side of her husband, giving him constant attention. It is believed that he has been caused him to attempt suicide. He had been away from home since last Tuesday, most of the time being spent in Decatur.

IS WAS NOT TASCOTT.

The Murderer of Millionaire Spell Still Living in Chicago.

Detective John A. Dier, of Chicago, tells an interesting story in relation to Tascott and the murder of A. J. Spell February 7, 1893. The detective alleges that Tascott is not the man who killed Spell, but in consideration of a large sum of money consented to leave the country and then draw upon himself the suspicion of being the murderer, in order to shield the real murderer who is still living in Chicago.

The detective says four men were at the Spell residence the night of the murder, the murderer, Tascott, who watched outside, and two other men; that Tascott was led into the affair by the statement that nothing but robbery was contemplated, while the facts were that the murderer had a serious business quarrel with Spell at the latter's barn the day before and went to the Spell residence that night with the intention of killing Spell, and after the robbery was completed, made a noise sufficient to arouse the old man for the purpose of killing him. Dier further states that the murderer was shot in the leg and went to a drug store on West Madison street, where his wound was dressed by the night clerk who was a new man working on a small salary, but who soon afterward turned up at a watering place in Wisconsin with a $10,000 stock of goods. When the shots were fired Tascott ran away, and as before stated, was subsequently induced to leave Chicago by the payment of a large sum of money. He has been in St. Paul, Manitoba and London, Canada, was in Chicago several days in 1891, and then went to Alaska, where he now is, and where he has not been recognized by any person known to him several years ago. The detective says that at one time he was prepared to bring Tascott to Chicago to turn state's evidence against the real murderer, but the plan was frustrated by people living in Chicago. This is an interesting and feasible story, and indicates that the murderer and friends of the family may be known to each other.

BLAINE'S DEATH IS NEAR

He is Sinking Rapidly at His Home in Washington

(By Special to the REPUBLICAN.)
CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—A Washington special to the Chicago News Record to-day says Hon. J. G. Blaine is sinking rapidly. He passed a restless night. The fact that the physician and family frankly admit his serious condition, leads to the conclusion that Blaine's death is near.

THE FEARFUL TORNADO.

Some of the Singular Freaks of Great Wind-forms in the West

The awful force of a tornado cannot be realized by any one who has not had an opportunity to become familiar therewith. The history of these disasters is replete with examples of the most extraordinary character. Thus an account of a storm which took place in Kansas in 1879 relates that a full plow weighing 700 pounds was carried a long distance, and one of the axle, one and three-quarter inches in diameter, was snapped squarely off.

Wagon wheels were broken into splinters and the trees twisted into all sorts of shapes. A man was carried into the air and there came into contact with a horse whose tail he seized and was thus carried along for a considerable distance and finally dropped to the ground, comparatively unharmed. A two horse wagon with one live horse attached to it, the other having been killed and torn away, was seen at a height of a hundred feet in the air. A hog weighing three hundred pounds had a number seven feet long and six inches square driven directly through its body. The wheel of a wagon was carried a mile while chickens were stripped of their feathers and the birds carried three miles from home.

In the same year, in 1879, a tornado carried away a horse no part of which was ever found. The carpet of a part of the house, however, was pulled from the floor and left on the ground uninjured. Several garments that had been in the house were found at a distance of five, or six miles. A large trunk was torn to pieces and the lock was found half a mile away driven into the rail of a fence. Two heavy quarter inch wagon tires were twisted literally into knots.

In Marshall county, Kan. the same year that the two storms already referred to occurred, another tornado tore down a massive iron bridge. It lifted the heavy structure squarely from the pier and carried it into the air. The rods and beams were twisted into all sorts of shapes. Rods two and one-half inches in diameter were broken squarely off. The structure was lifted from the abutments so easily that but two stones of the three piers that supported it were disturbed in any way.

In April, 1879, there was a severe tornado near Waterbury, S. C., which was signified by many peculiar occurrences. A hickory tree fifty-four inches in diameter was lifted bodily out of the ground and carried some distance up a steep bank. An iron chisel was carried ninety feet and driven two inches into a log. A basket of books weighing fifty pounds was carried two and a half miles and found hanging to a tree with the contents intact. Garments in pots were carried a mile and found uninjured. Letters and books were carried six miles, and articles of clothing were found ten miles from their owners' homes.

At a storm in Missouri an entire railroad train, with the exception of the engine, was thrown from the track, the cars being deposited in all sorts of positions at varying distances from the track. In a recent storm in Kansas a water tank, with a horse inside of it, was lifted by the wind and deposited on the roof of a two-story building, while trees were driven through the walls of houses and many other strange occurrences were noticed. In fact, volumes could be filled with the bare recital of the strange freaks of tornadoes.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Miss Mary J. Conway has been postmaster at East Chicago, N. M. for over ten years and has just been reconfirmed.
